I have practiced criminal law for over 35 years and never quite have seen anything like this case. The defendant was charged with murder but there was no body to be found. There was a lot of blood evidence and DNA but no corpus delicti, or evidence of where or how the crime was committed.

However, there was a witness.... Not an eyewitness, but an ear witness. A jailhouse snitch, a man whom you would be unlikely to believe in most circumstances, stepped forward with a few details but enough to get an arrest warrant.

We had half a trial. The defendant pleads guilty and gets a seriously low sentence even though he was, in fact, guilty.

Almost 7 years later I learn that my client killed not only the victim in my case but many others, burying them in his “garden”. He is tied with one other man in Connecticut history as the most notorious serial killer the state has experienced. He is now doing several life sentences and will never get out.

It was quite a shock to know that the man with the gentle tone and accent was what most people refer to as a “monster”. I’ll fill you in on the details and answer your questions to the best of my ability.
